School of Mom Rock

In another life, you saw yourself as the hot chick married to the cool rock star. Sort of a Gwyneth Paltrow kind of thing: happy, healthy and happening in a major way. But these days, that well-loved Nirvana T-shirt is looking a little threadbare, and what was once music that rattled and hummed seems closer to Top Forty.

Here's some good news: concert tees with jeans is a combo that still manages to come off with style when you're pregnant. It seems to signify that, far from being June Cleaver, you're more than ready to be a cutting-edge mom when duty calls.

Unbuttoned Maternity – quick to figure this out – has cornered the market on vintage rock maternity tees. The line is made by Rock Me Mama, and features super-soft cotton and adjustable ties in the back so that you can wear them even in your third trimester. Emblazoned with everyone from the Ramones and AC/DC to Blondie and the Stones, even Jennifer Garner was spotted in one romping around L.A. giving the look the Hollywood stamp of approval.

Now, just in time for the cold weather and holiday parties, is a limited-edition, one-of-a-kind vintage bouclé tweed rock jacket. Custom made and personalized with the logo of the band of your choice, this cropped jacket has a silk lining and is encrusted on the inside with Swarovski crystals for that over-the-top rock star appeal. The cut lies perfectly above the belly for a look that manages to be refined and unruly at the same time.

Which, after all, is exactly the intention. Rock on.
